MEET THE FAN DESIGNER

Jonny Campbell (LEGO® Ideas name Diving Faces) is from a small town just outside Belfast in Northern Ireland. When he's not overseeing the Northern Ireland budget in his job with the government's Finance Department, he plays football and video games and loves recreating scenes from films and television with LEGO bricks.

Jonny with his original submission

"The possibility of having your product idea turned into an official LEGO® set is every fan's dream. I've always enjoyed building with LEGO bricks since a very young age and I also now enjoy building LEGO sets with my wife and our two children. Jaws is my favourite film of all time, so I really wanted to recreate it in LEGO bricks. I re-watched Jaws several times, pausing at various stages, to get as many angles of the boat and as much detail as possible. I also looked at loads of pictures of the animatronic shark used in the film to try and capture him as closely as possible – even including his hinged jaw! I really like the shape of the shark's mouth. It wasn't easy to achieve but I like how it has turned out with the hinged jaw, which makes it look more like the pretend shark from the film as opposed to a real great white. The most difficult part was probably making the mast of the boat sturdy while not losing any of the details. I experimented with lots of different variations until I finally settled on its present design. It took just under eight months to reach 10,000 supporters, and I'd really like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who supported the project along the way. I hope it will be loved by so many Jaws, shark, boat and LEGO fans out there."

DA DUM... DA DUM...

You only have to hum the first few ominous, guttural tones from the iconic opening theme of Jaws to get the chills! It's the summer of 1975 and the idyllic, fictional beach resort town of Amity Island is preparing to welcome swarms of summer tourists. But barely have the opening credits rolled off the screen before this picturesque scene is shattered by a lurking menace. A giant of a great white shark, with enormous strength and resolve, has come to seek out new prey... Soon, the surfaces of the island's calm waters and friendly community begin to crack, with equal parts horror and humorous denial. Chief of Police Martin Brody and shark expert Matt Hooper from the Oceanographic Institute set out to catch the aggressive attacker. Quint, a no-nonsense fisherman and army veteran with a highly developed sense of dark humour and a proclivity for sea shanties, joins the hunt.

“Tell them I’m going fishing.”

– Martin Brody

The original summer blockbuster

Back in 1975, aboard the Orca – Brody, with his calm, dry wit, Hooper, with his advanced technological equipment, and Quint, with his brute force and instinct to fight fire with fire – the scene was set for an explosive showdown. As the camaraderie and territoriality between our heroes and the great white were put to the test, the film cleverly preyed on a primal fear of the unknown. The sharp dialogue, visceral cinematography and bone-chilling soundtrack kept audiences in nail-biting suspense. As Jaws inspired several sequels, it also influenced filmmakers, artists and pop culture in the years that followed. The release of a behind-the-scenes book and documentary just added to fans' excitement.

FROM THE LEGO® DESIGNERS

"For the first major motion picture to be filmed on open water, the production crew found creative solutions to operate and film the mechanical shark action scenes. That creative spirit shines through in Jonny's submission and the final model – a split-second freeze-frame before the shark makes contact with the Orca. Like Quint, the Orca may have seen better days, but it's full of surprise modifications, practical amenities and hard-hitting equipment. The boat hull was tricky to build with all its changing compound geometries, so, to use our elements to the fullest, the bow section of the Orca is actually built upside down! The shark, once completed, can be posed bolting out of the water or in full figure on the display stand alongside our hero minifigures in their full 1970s regalia – or used to chase down unsuspecting friends and family, of course."

"We wanted to honour Captain Quint's fateful fishing boat as a virtual extension of the charismatic captain himself. Inside is a map of Amity Island, based on the area around Martha's Vineyard in Massachusetts, USA, where the film was primarily shot. Xs mark shark incidents (including, strangely enough, the incident the crew is just about to run into!). The newspaper that reports the unfortunate attack on fan designer Jonny Campbell features an artist's rendition of a shark similar to Quint's blackboard masterpiece. Of course, no homage to the Jaws franchise would be complete without one of its most quoted phrases from Chief Brody: 'You're gonna need a bigger boat.'"
